

How do we balance the interior with the exterior? We often seek answers in all the wrong places - outside of the self.

These songs have been modified to change the emphasis from an exterior form of validation and companionship, to an internal empowerment.

True, some people will take this as a narcissistic gesture. However, healthy self-love and self-protection do not foster egotism in all individuals. The balance is up to each of us. The modification has been made to start the change from within.

Sheet-music was the primary format, prior to the recording device, that most people accessed music. In this way, I invite each person to play, and sing, these songs for themselves.
